A Smarter Ohio

Human Trafficking

Resources Available from the State Library

This month Governor John Kasich kicked off a new public awareness campaign to ramp-up Ohio's ongoing fight against human trafficking, the illegal trade of people for commercial sex or forced labor exploitation that enslaves approximately 1,000 Ohioans every year.

The new campaign, led by the Ohio Human Trafficking Task Force, gives Ohioans new resources for how they can personally help combat the problem by reporting suspicious activity. It also is aimed at connecting with trafficking victims themselves, with outreach materials in places where they are likely to see them, such as public transit sites and highway rest areas.

The Task Force was formed to marshal the resources of the State of Ohio to coordinate efforts to identify and rescue victims, create a coordinated law enforcement system to investigate and prosecute human trafficking crimes, and to provide the services and treatment necessary for victims to regain control of their lives.

Ask a Librarian

I'm trying to find my agency's annual reports. Do you have them?

Answer:

The State Library is the primary repository for all Ohio government documents. We have annual reports for many state agencies going back to the agency's creation. We don't have every agency annual report, but our collection of annual reports is quite substantial.

Like many other agencies, the State Library has committed to promote awareness of the issue. In addition to print books on the subject, see our new Human Trafficking information guide for a list of recommended journals, websites and library databases on the subject. Download the guide at library.ohio.gov/sites/default/files/trafficking.pdf

As with any other topic, the Reference Department at the State Library is happy to help with information requests on human trafficking.

Is there a resource available with up-to-date software tutorials?

Answer:

With your State Library card, you can access many software tutorials through the LearningExpress Library. The site has tutorials for the most recent versions of Microsoft programs like Excel and PowerPoint as well as tutorials on graphic design programs and more.
